

White Plains Home Construction Company Creates Buzz as Builder of Homes and Lasting Relationships

Builder's Unique Philosophy Sets It Apart from Others in Industry

(White Plains, NY)---In a time when a staggering number of home builders are in arbitration or are being sued by home owners for major construction defects, overall incompetence and outright fraud, finding a trustworthy home builder who goes one step beyond the average home construction experience is rare.

“Building relationships is as important to me as building a home,” says George Braverman, founder and president of Nantucket Home Builders Inc, a custom, spot home builder in Westchester County. “Developing a close relationship with each home owner is intrinsic to successful home construction and it allows me to satisfy their distinct living space needs.”

It's one of the biggest problems with home builders: once the work is complete and problems arise, the builder is nowhere to be found. Not the case with Nantucket. Even after they're settled in, Braverman's customers regularly call him on his cell phone to ask for his help or expert opinion on home products, vendor referrals or to discuss him building yet another home for them.

“Nantucket's lasting relationships and reliability is what keeps our clients coming back,” says Braverman.

“After spending years in the commercial construction industry, Braverman decided to apply his architecture and building experience to home construction. In addition to building the highest quality single family homes, he also wanted to personalize the experience for home owners and satisfy them beyond their expectations.

Making clients the top priority during the home construction as well as after is part of the process with Nantucket Home Builders. Those who buy homes from Braverman and company are said to be part of the Nantucket “family”. “My clients are my main concern; I always have an open ear for them,” says Braverman.

Since the inception of Nantucket Home Builders in 1993, the company has built 28 new single family homes, ranging from $1-3 million in price, in the towns of White Plains, Rye, Scarsdale and Larchmont. Braverman intends to build 10-15 new homes in Westchester County in the next five years and continue to be a “hands-on” builder.

As a native of Westchester County, Braverman fully understands the marketplace and is committed to the maintaining the unique “New England” look and feel of the area. Each Nantucket home is designed to blend in and aesthetically enhance the character of its neighborhood.

While large, national home builders develop subdivisions of cookie-cutter style homes, reputable, custom builders who are sensitive to the quality, fine details character of each home they build are hard to find. Careful planning and Braverman's personal involvement goes into the execution of every Nantucket home.

“From participation in the architectural planning to the purchase of only top grade materials, Nantucket takes extra steps to ensure that every detail of quality home construction is covered,” says Braverman.

Braverman's attention to detail has earned the respect of many satisfied customers, which has led clients to build subsequent Nantucket homes. The company's reputation has extended beyond Westchester County and into New York City where many of its clients move from.
